Processional and Recessional Music:
MR. GRAHAM STOCKS

Graham Stocks is an eminent organist within the region. He has advised on the design of several major organ installations including the Kath Toy Organ in Joyes Hall. He has given organ recitals with the ABC and plays regularly in regional churches.

Mr Stocks was a member of the Council of Riverina-Murray Institute of Higher Education between 1981 and 1989.

Interlude:

CHRISTINE GIDDINGS
DEAN DOYLE

Accompanied by
KEITH RADFORD

DEAN DOYLE is a musician with the 1RTB Band at the Kapooka army base. In addition to playing trombone he is the band's resident singer and has appeared in concerts across Australia. The week after graduation, he leaves for Turkey where he will play at the ANZAC 75th anniversary. Dean played the role of Magaldi in Rivcol Drama's production of EVITA last November.

CHRISTINE GIDDINGS will graduate at one of this year's ceremonies with her Associate Diploma of Arts (Theatre Performance). She has appeared in a variety of productions as part of her studies at Charles Sturt University including the title role in EVITA.

KEITH RADFORD is the director of the Riverina Conservatorium Centre which is affiliated with Charles Sturt University and the N.S.W. State Conservatorium of Music. He has been musically directing operas and musicals since 1967 and was musical director for EVITA.

THE WIND BENEATH MY WINGS, by Larry Henley and Jeff Silbar.
The lyrics of this song are felt to be particularly appropriate for graduation. The guest artists wish to dedicate it to the parents, wives, husbands, families and friends who provided the graduates with the support that is so essential during a long period of tertiary study.

The 1990 Conferring of Awards ceremonies mark the start of a new era in tertiary education with the first graduates from Charles Sturt University-Riverina. Established as a major member of the multi-campus Charles Sturt University last year, CSU-Riverina inherits a long tradition in serving the needs of a large area of New South Wales, and elsewhere by external study. Since it opened in 1972 as the Riverina College of Advanced Education and through its growth as Riverina-Murray Institute of Higher Education, the institution has expanded in all areas, with a record enrolment of more than 7,300 students in 1990 in courses by full-time, part-time and external study at Wagga Wagga.

CSU-Riverina features an attractive campus of more than 600 hectares on the northern outskirts of the City of Wagga Wagga. Boorooma Area is the site of ongoing development and the centre for most academic and associated administration functions, lecture facilities and the William Merrylees Library. Agriculture Area was formerly the Wagga Agricultural College before its integration into the university in 1976, and comprises a 544 hectare mixed farm, as well as administrative offices and student residences. In addition, South Area in the southern suburbs of the city itself, is a major residential area of the university. A university bus service runs between South Area and the campus north of Wagga at regular intervals each week day.

In a continuing drive for academic excellence in the quality and scope of its courses, more than 50 courses have been offered at master, postgraduate diploma, degree, diploma and associate diploma level. These courses reflect a responsiveness to community needs and to developments in the areas of agriculture, natural resources, creative and performing arts, business and commerce, computing, humanities and social sciences, teaching and applied science and technology. The university also supports a number of centres for teaching and research in a variety of important fields.

A continuing development programme is a strong feature of the university's growth and a number of major building projects are scheduled for 1990, including a new gymnasium in the area near the swimming pool, radiography facilities, and more self-contained cottages for student accommodation. Planning is also expected to begin on $4 million extensions to almost treble the area of the current library facilities in the William Merrylees Library. Over 900 students will graduate in the four Conferring of Awards ceremonies of Charles Sturt University-Riverina this year.
