Dear Mr. Walter, Deeming you may not be aware of it I am writing with the object of informing you that I think your father is very far from being well just now. There is no immediate cause for alarm & moreover I am no doctor. In my mind however I should respectfully say that your father has at least turned the corner. A week or so back he told me, most sorrowfully, that he could not live 12 months. This you will admit is something for him to confess. I immediately hastened to dissuade him of this idea. To-day he called here & told both Mr Dickson & I that he fears he is failing fast. He informed us also that he can't sleep at night through coughing & that he had been to 3 doctors here. You will please keep this letter as strictly confidential, as your father may feel annoyed with me if it were found I had unnecessarily alarmed you. Personally Mr Walter's candid opinion is that your father at present should not be in Sydney without some of his family. I trust it may turn-out that I am unduly alarmed, but I think it best you

Should the doctor's opinion cause you anxiety? Don't worry. I will find him & tell him to stay
