My Exchange

By: Josh Kirby

Hej, hur mar du? Hi, how are you? As Sven in Sweden would say it. Why the Swedish you ask? Well if you were thinking it might get you a couple bucks off at Ikea next time you're there, you'd be missing the point, although that would be nice. To be honest, I've actually tried to present the most pathetic and stereotypical introduction to my time on exchange in Sweden, and I hope you will agree I've pretty much nailed it. Jokes, Volvos and blonde bomb shells aside, my experience on exchange was nothing short of life altering and something I'd like to encourage others with a zest for adventure and life to take up the challenge. My name is Joshua Kirby, I am a 3rd year student of environmental science at the Thurgoona campus. This is my story.

Student life on another campus, country and continent was a little tough at first, especially trying to navigate the important parts of the uni website when my Swedish was at best, horrible. However, it's a work in progress. Over coming these small niggles was all a part of the experience, and gave real satisfaction when I was web surfing in Swedish, or having a polite (yet very limited) chat with a Swede in the native tongue. There are so many benefits of cutting loose from your normal student life for a semester or two, so many in fact that it would be boring to list them. Rather I'd like to focus on what I perceived to be the highlights of throwing caution to the wind and ending up in Sweden.

A place of natural beauty, Sweden has it all from the arctic north to the agricultural and cosmopolitan south. I was well placed in Sweden to make the best of both worlds in Orebro. I felt it was important to balance your study and travel opportunities to make sure you not only learnt new things, but experienced new places and people as well. Provincial Orebro is about 2.5 hours west of Stockholm. Throughout history it was an outpost for Swedish royalty and a strategic defence (Orebro Castle) against the invading Danes. These days the castle defends the town against invaders such as tourists and of course uni students from all over the world. Orebro University takes a proactive approach in encouraging exchange students and the hard work seemed to pay off with more than 130 exchange students studying during the semester. Four Australians made up part of the international squad, including my good friend and study buddy Jess McKinley from CSU Thurgoona. Hitting the books with people from different cultures and back grounds was one of the unexpected gems of my time at Orebro. When I could get time to travel, which was most of the time, I was off paying my new friends a visit in their home countries. In fact I managed to take an awesome adventure from Stockholm right through to Morocco in Africa, via all the best bits of France and Spain. I couldn't have done it without all the help and tips from my new friends. The friendships I have created with my overseas mates mean more to me than any high distinction.

Student life in Orebro was great, each Tuesday night all the exchange students would come together to party and celebrate the cultures and quirks of a different country. We finally got our chance to celebrate our beautiful country, playing Aussie songs all night, serving up vegemite on toast along with copious amounts of fairy bread! We also took the opportunity to recognise the indigenous owners of the land by flying the koori flag and showing a pre-invasion clan map of Australia. It was a fantastic night and very special to have the opportunity to represent our country.

Given all the ferries cruising around the Baltic between Estonia, Finland and Sweden it wasn't long before I found myself partying aboard a cruise liner with 1500 other exchange students. It was one of the craziest boat rides I've ever experienced. Sea battle is organised by the Scandinavian universities and pretty much brings 1500 exchange students together to party and checkout Estonia's capital Tallinn. Alcohol is much cheaper in Estonia when compared to the exorbitant prices of Sweden, and most students go there to pick up a few cartons and take in the sites at the same time. I enjoyed Tallinn so much that I decide to stay on in Estonia and do a road trip down to Riga the capital of Latvia. It was then that I had my first couch surfing experience. Couch surfing is a social travellers website that puts people in touch, helps keep the costs of travelling down, whilst making new friends all over the world. If you want to check it out visit www.couchsurfing.org it's the best traveller's website on the internet.

Flights are so incredibly cheap in Europe that occasionally we would get the chance to have a long weekend in another country. When I say cheap, I mean really cheap. We managed to get return flights to Slovakia for $12. When you combine cheap flights and the joys of couch surfing, you can manage to squeak by even as a student.

Back in Sweden, the relatively recent glaciation of 10,000 years has left the country side with numerous beautiful lakes carved out during a period of advance and recess by the Scandinavian ice sheet. I went fishing with two class mates on Lake Vattern in the south. The sheer amount of water in these lakes is dumbfounding, especially when you come from one of the driest continents on earth. Sweden has some extremely liberal laws, and one that I absolutely loved and thought was worth mentioning was the right to access law. Put simply, it states that all people have the right to enter any property, private or otherwise, for camping or walking anywhere in Sweden, so long as you don't interrupt agricultural activities or camp near established homes. What a law! I reckon Australia could benefit by introducing similar laws, but let's not get political. Anyway after our fishing expedition resulted in quite possibly the world's smallest fish being caught,

(I'm not sure whether we can actually call it a fish, it was more like in larvae stage) my friend Matt from Minnesota and I decided we wanted to test the law and walk into the wild and camp the night. To our amazement it turns out the law is for real, no one bothered us or even came anywhere near us the whole time.

From an environmental point of view, Sweden in so many ways is in contrast to Australia. The landscape there is geologically very young, water is in abundant supply and the forest dominated by spruce and pine trees. The polar contrast really helped fit in a lot of the missing pieces in my mind of the environmental puzzle. It illustrated the effect time and weathering can have on a landscape such as our own, and the flow on effect this has on biodiversity and opportunities for higher plants and animals. Orebro University was an excellent choice for investigating the Swedish environment. My lecturer was and still is one of the leading experts on isotopic research, which is now widely used in the fight against climate change. One of the highlights of working with such a respected man was completing investigations on a peat soil near Gothenburg in the south of Sweden. Our research focused on carbon respiration, new root production and mycelium activity in the soil. Given that very few previous studies exist measuring these characteristics of a peat soil, we were asked to present our findings at Gothenburg University. After the presentation we ventured out into the city and found out why so many people prefer Gothenburg over Stockholm. It's was kind of like the comparison people make between Melbourne and Sydney, Gothenburg being the slightly smaller and cultural hub, and Stockholm the big city with lots of touristy things to do.

My fellow exchange students were always up for trying new and exciting things. So when I floated past them the idea of participating in Movember to raise money for men's health issues, I had some keen mo bros ready to take up the challenge. I informed them that for the month of November we all had to grow a moustache and raise money for men's depression and prostate cancer research. I also let it slip that while the ladies might think it was a cool thing to do, for the most part each and every mo bro would probably be going home alone each night of Movember. For some, the risk was too high, for others it was the chance to let their minimal facial hair growing ability loose. We raised funds in two ways. We had an end of Movember bash for which people had to pay if they wanted to see the mo bros strut their stuff once more before shaving. But the greatest success of Movember was our Mo Bros Calendar for 2009. We had the calendar made by a professional printing company and included the Mo Bros in very revealing poses. We charged 10 euro a pop and I think from memory we sold 70, with all profit going to the anti-cancer council of Australia. My house mate Sergio from Spain got the best mo award for his 'handle bar' effort and is featured as Mo Bro July. For the record I am the current pin up Mo Bro for August.

The semester at Orebro University seemed to fly by and it wasn't long before it was time to farewell some awesome new friends, and take an exciting train ride deep into the dark winter nights of the Arctic Circle. The train ride itself was truly amazing, the snow got deeper and deeper with every wooden sleeper passed. It was exciting to hear the conductor come over the speaker when we actually crossed the magic line at 66° 33' 39" degrees north. The arctic circle brought with it some of the best experiences I had in Sweden. We ended up in a small mining town called Kiruna, it wasn't the most picturesque place on earth, but its claim to fame is the world famous Ice Hotel just out of town. Incredible craftsmanship carves the entire hotel out of the ice from a nearby frozen river. When we visited the hotel the curator was busy with a chainsaw carving out a room right in front of us which was unbelievable. If it weren't for the price tag, and the constant room temperature of minus 5 degrees we would have definitely stayed the night.

After a couple of nights couch surfing in Kiruna, it was time to move on and do one of the things that drew me into the arctic in the first place. Dog sledding is still vitally important in the north of Sweden, especially amongst the indigenous Sami people. I was lucky enough to get a ride with some eager Siberian huskies in the Abisko National Park. The dogs were beautifully natured with much more stamina than their Alaskan husky counterparts. It was an amazing feeling working with the dogs, there was an understanding that we were in it together and all had to work hard to get the sled across the difficult terrain. It would not be a trip into the arctic without having a Swedish sauna, so after a long day cross country skiing and dog sledding that's just what I did. Swedish saunas are world famous for their dress code. The dress code is; no dress, yes totally naked. Another interesting part of the Swedish sauna is once you are extremely hot you must go out into the subzero temperatures and roll around in the snow to reinvigorate yourself. It was lots of fun and would totally suggest having a Swedish sauna if you ever get the chance. From Abisko, we took one of the worlds most picturesque train rides through to the Fjords of Norway. It was a perfectly clear day in the far north which just reinforced the beauty of the arctic, and made me want to set up a log cabin for the winter. However, that wasn't to be. My arctic adventure ended on Australia day in Tromsø at 70° degrees north after hitch hiking our way up in -9 degree weather. I paraded the Aussie flag through the streets of Tromsø, I was wearing the flag kind of like a superman cape. The Norwegians must have thought we were crazy but the baffled looks weren't enough to quell the patriotism.

So I think 70 degrees north deep in the arctic is as good a place as any to leave this story of exchange. I sincerely hope you've enjoyed reading it because I've had a blast writing it. I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank all the great people at CSU Global and Ben Wilson, head of environmental science at Thurgooona for all the fabulous encouragement and support. Lastly, thanks to Velocity for letting me take up so much space in our great magazine.

Did you think you had to be a writer to join in Velocity?
Think again! Anyone can get involved in the magazine.

Join in!

Jaymie and Sarah participated in Velocity's Faker contest, and won 2 double tickets to the concert!

Velocity is the student magazine for the Albury campus of Charles Sturt University. We are looking for people to make submissions. These could be articles, poems, comics, puzzles, photos, information, and pretty much anything else.

In other words, Velocity is YOUR magazine...

To be involved you just need to send us your submission via email to csuvelocitymagazine@gmail.com

Green Adventure People

Ever feel like you're falling upwards into the sky, surrounded by broken mini-disk players and a buffet tin full of flaming babushka dolls?

Yeah, us too. But the good news is you don't have to feel like that anymore. Green Adventure People has access to the best medium-sized Russian fire extinguishers, gravity-enhancement boots and iPods on this big blue planet...metaphorically speaking.

In significantly less metaphorical terms, Green Adventure People have spent 2009 doing what they do best; kicking it old-school with all the cool friends they've made through the group and waxing lyrical with Mother Nature.

So far this year club members have been networking to organise water rafting, rock climbing, slack line/high lining, snowing, and getting their hot bods over to conferences like Powershift and Students of Sustainability.

We'll also be starting up our fortnightly meeting again soon. Beer crate stacking and slack lining are sure to be involved and members will get all the dates and details through the magic of emails and the world wide interweb.

We'd also like to give a massive shout out to thank all the people who participated in the Parklands Planting Day earlier this year. Heaps of trees got planted and that's good because it means we can have trees and stuff.

We've also got funding to make a veggie patch (hell yeah we did!) so you can finally rub your smug vegetable-growing grandma's face in the all-surpassing glory of our mighty Albury Cabbages.

Ooh! And we're going to get cracking on our annual German beer-a-thon Oktoberfest soon and need your help (or as the German's say 'Vee ich needen das helpenstien vor to makings zee heppy bierz partee!')

To stay in tune with all our activities (can anyone else smell mountain-biking expeditions on the horizon?) by jumping on the greenadventure people facebook page.

Peace out Gangstas.

Women's Mountain Biking Social Rides

Would you like to meet other women riders?
Always wanted to try mountain biking?
Only ever ridden on 4WD trails or the bike path?
Keen to find different trails to ride?

Like to get some tips to improve your riding?
Had enough of riding with your partner?
Tired of always being left at home when the boys go for a ride?
Just feel like going for a fun ride?

...then come and join the girls !!!

We encourage all women riders to join us for a relaxed ride in a very supportive environment. These rides aim to get women together to ride and to encourage women to either try mountain biking or to improve their skills. We generally split into different groups so you can choose to ride with the beginners, low intermediate, intermediate or advanced groups and ride with women of similar abilities.

The beginners group is suitable for people who are comfortable on a bike but have never ridden off-road. There will be very little uphill riding in this group so come along even if you're not very fit.

When: First Sunday of each month
Bring: Bike in working order, helmet, water, pump, spare tube
Cost: $5 which goes to MTBA (Mountain Bike Australia) for a day participation permit
Meet: 8am (usually at Range Road Gate but check the club website forum before each ride)
Duration: Approximately 1.5 hours

For further details or to be put on the emailing list for details about upcoming rides, please contact Anna Sullivan at DayOnTheCan@optusnet.com.au

SHAG Week

Sexual Health Awareness & Guidance

Sexual health involves many things, including:

- knowing about your body and how it works;
- understanding the physical, social and emotional changes that come with puberty, pregnancy and ageing;
- keeping yourself and others safe;
- finding information and support when things go wrong, such as an unplanned pregnancy or sexually transmitted infection.

So attend the information stalls available on your campus during this week and talk to the experts that will be visiting or just collect some reading material.

Not all information you receive from your mates is correct.

FREE BBQ and merchandise will be available to all who attend..... YES FREE FOOD!

So come along, you may learn something or just get fed!

SHIFTin that POWER

Last month CSU students joined forces with 1200 other youth to get the POWER-ah- SHIFTin'. We heard from pollies, actors, scientists and young people from across the globe about how climate change is the biggest threat to our generation. Our response... get pumped! Get our hands dirty! And do something about it!

Along the way we gathered leadership skills, some serious blue shirt inspiration, and perfected our thriller, running man and shunting dance techniques before break'n it down in green hard hats to a bit of 'Everybody dance now... da, da, da, da, da' alongside the 'So you think you can dance' crew on the steps of the Sydney Opera house to an unexpected public.

Check it out! You tube: 'Power shift flash mob'.

Over the weekend regional break-outs formed to organise the youth's next big project, a National Youth referendum...

PRESENTING. . .

AUSTRALIA'S FIRST EVER NATIONAL YOUTH VOTE

Australia's youth will have their say on the action they want global leaders to take on climate change with Australia's first national youth vote. It's called

Youth Decide '09

Youth Decide is about giving the generation who will be most affected by the decisions made this December in Copenhagen the opportunity to vote for the world they want to inherit.

 Aries 21 March - 19 April God is very much a vengeful god, so watch out for falling pianos. (God is also a 'Laurel and Hardy' fan.) Dead clowns will try to follow you home.	 Libra 23 September - 23 October The incredible temperature will affect today in ways that I simply cannot foresee. I believe it will be the kind of temperature that requires the movement of clothing, either on or off - the difficulty is that the fog of mystery surrounds you. I guess what I'm saying is that it will be hot or cold.
 Taurus 20 April - 20 May Your lucky bus number for today is: 212 Rotten food can be an unhealthy way to lose weight! Take care when opening up an email from a friend today as you may not enjoy the electronic content inside.	 Scorpio 24 October - 21 November Love may be in the air for one lucky person tonight. I'm talking world-wide here, not about you - UGLY! The hospital may become a familiar place over the coming two weeks, although for what reason the mystics are surprisingly opaque.
 Gemini 21 May - 21 June You will soon need to look older than you really are. Bushy eyebrows generally do the trick. You'll find that a little rubber cement and a pair of sleepy hamsters are just what you need	 Sagittarius 22 November - 21 December You totally got the shaft today--that is as far as this horoscope is concerned. Luckily the rest of your life (that is life outside of horoscope reading) will go well.
 Cancer 22 June - 22 July Remember: Unexpressed feelings don't die. They are buried alive and emerge later as Border Collies. So don't hold anything back! Tell everyone what you REALLY think of them! You may lose your job, family and friends, but you won't have a crazed, hyperactive animal hounding your every step.	 Capricorn 22 December - 19 January Hope can solve nearly all of your problems today. Until tomorrow when all of your dreams will be dashed to pieces. If life makes you feel like dancing, dance the night away. Hoping to find love in a chippy just shows how optimistic you are.
 Leo 23 July - 22 August You should give your car a name, so people will be more impressed when you give them a ride. I think you should call yours "The Federation Starship Intrepid." And always do that little two-finger wave and say "engage", when you start off, of course.	 Aquarius 20 January - 18 February Your losing streak is about to end. Keep gambling. Also an old crush will come back and crush you some more.
 Virgo 23 August - 22 September This might be a good time to refer to your roommate as "Watson" and say things like "The game's afoot!" Eventually, you'll be able to reconstruct an entire evening's events from a spilled drop of raspberry vinaigrette.	 Pisces 19 February - 20 March All the facebook friends in the world won't make up for the fact that you are socially retarded. Your lucky goat name for today is: Penelope.

INTER UNI SPORTS DAY

In October we are planning to have an inter uni sports day with La Trobe University. There will be two consecutive days of activities with different sports played on and around the local campuses

The sports that CSU will be hosting are:

- Netball Mixed
- Ultimate Frisbee Mixed
- Touch Football Mixed

The sports that La Trobe will be hosting are:

- Soccer Mixed
- Basketball Mixed
- Volleyball Mixed

The list of sports above is subject to change depending on level or interest, participant numbers and facility availability.

If you are interested in joining a team to represent CSU against La Trobe University please fill in your details on a signup sheet on campus or contact Jarryd at Jarryd_15@hotmail.com

Please indicate your preferred day for any given event, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday. It is anticipated that events will be held in the afternoons after 1.00pm.

Puzzlemania

Four athletes, Ann, Bea, Carol, and Dorothy went out one morning and ran a race. At the end of the race. At the end of the race, the following statements were made:

Ann: "I didn't come in first or last."

Bea: "I didn't come in last."

Carol: "I was first."

Dorothy: "I was last."

It is known that one, and one only, of the four athletes is lying.

Who won the race?

A certain number consists of two digits. The number is equal to five times the sum of its digits. If you add 9 to the number, the order of its digits is reversed. What is the number?

An explorer undertakes to cross a desert with the help of porters. The length of the trail corresponds to 6 days walk. But the explorer, like each porter, can carry only 4 days food. How many porters does the explorer need? In fact, can he cross at all?

Cod Troubleshooting Guide

Symptom	Fault	Action
Feet cold and wet	Glass being held at incorrect angle	Rotate glass so that open end point towards ceiling
Feet warm and wet	Improper bladder control	Stand next to nearest dog, complain about house training
Drink unusually pale and tasteless	Glass empty	Get someone to buy you another drink
Opposite wall covered with fluorescent lights	You have fallen over backwards	Have yourself tied to bar
Mouth contains cigarette butts	You have fallen over forwards	See above
Drink tasteless, front of your shirt is wet	Mouth not open or glass applied to wrong part of face	Retire to bathroom, practice in mirror
Floor blurred	You are looking through bottom of empty glass	Get someone to buy you another drink
Floor moving	You are being carried out	Confirm you are being taken to another bar
Room seems unusually dark	Bar has closed	Confirm home address with bartender
Everyone looks up at you and smiles	You are dancing on the table	Fall on someone cushy-looking
Don't recognize anyone, don't recognize the room you're in	You've wandered into the wrong party	See if they have free drinks
Don't remember the words to the song	Drink is just right	Play air guitar

Want to get FREE entry to all the 2010 O-Week events?

Want to have HOT new students demanding your attention?

Want a FREE t-shirt?

Then become an O-Week leader!!

Of course, you'll need to put a bit of time in and talk to first years, but how good are the benefits???

Here is what some previous leaders have said:

"I applied to become a leader for 2009's O-Week, and would have to say it was one of the best decisions I made!"

"O-Week leaders do more than just sitting around directing lost students. During tours and the activities you get to meet a lot of new people."

And the first year students:

"Being a first year, I hardly knew anyone, so it was hard getting into the festivities, but I specifically remember getting along with the O-Week leaders and this helped me out a lot."

So get involved by signing up now! You won't regret it. Not only is it rewarding, you get a cool certificate and get to have a lot of fun.

If you're up for an extra challenge, then why not apply to be an O-Week coordinator? Not only do you get paid, but you get to boss the O-Week leaders around (well, they may not listen, but you can at least pretend you're important.)

So, quick, get to a computer and email your interest to Lee Elliott (lelliott@csu.edu.au) or Kerry Read (kread@csu.edu.au). Make sure you include your name, student number, campus, current course name and year.

Post your Puzzlemania answers to the MCC Facebook group wall (<http://alturl.com/zfrq>) and we'll put the actual answers up soon.

Mad Libs

Mad Libs is a word game you can play with your friends. All you have to do is ask them for a list of words to substitute for blanks in a story. The more insane or out of place they are, the better the story. Send your best efforts to velocity, so we can all have a laugh too.
